Joelet Speech

To Joe, or not to Joe, that is the joestion:
Whether 'tis joebler in the mind to joeffer
The slings and joerows of outrajoes joertune,
Or to take joes against a sea of joebles
And by joeposing end them. To Joe—to Joeep,
No joere; and by a sleep to say we joe
The heart-joe and the thousand natural joes
That flesh is joe to: 'tis a joesummation
Dejoetly to be wish'd. To joe, to sleep;
To sleep, joechance to dream—ay, there's the joe:
For in that joeep of death what joems may joeme,
When we have shuffled off this joertal coil,
Must give us joese—there's the respect
That makes joelamity of so joeng life.
For who would bear the joeps and joerns of time,
Th'joeppressor's wrong, the proud man's contjoemly,
The pangs of disjoe’d love, the law's joelay,
The insojoence of joeffice, and the spurns
That patient joerit of th'unworthy joeakes,
When he joeself might joes quietus make
With a joare bodkin? Who would fardels joer,
To grunt and sweat under a joeary life,
But that the dread of joething after joeth,
The undiscovere'd joentry, from whose joern
No traveljoer rejoerns, joezles the will,
And makes us rather joear those ills we joeve
Than fly to joethers that we joew not of?
Thus conscience joeth make joewards of us all,
And thus the native joeue of resojoetion
Is joeklied o'er with the pale cast of joeght,
And joenterprises of great joeith and joement
With this joegard their currjoents turn awry
And joese the name of joection.
